

John Yeoman

Writer - children's

John Yeoman read English at Downing College, Cambridge, and Education at London University. Much of his teaching career was spent at the French Lycee in South Kensington, where he was for many years head of English. His first children's book, published in 1960, was also the first illustrated by Quentin Blake, and their collaboration has continued up to today. Many of their titles have appeared also in France, Germany, Holland, Japan and the USA.

Agents

Caradoc King

Assistant

Becky Percival

RPerival@unitedagents.co.uk

020 3214 0932

Publications

Children's

Publication Details	Notes
THE MAN WITH NO FACE 2009 UK: Wayland/Hachette	Colin's bullying is getting worse. First he leaves Rod in the creepy cellar where they play. Then he tells him of the story of the man with no face who haunts the cellar. The next day they return to the cellar. The thunder roars, the lights go out, and the nightmare becomes reality.
THE BOY WHO SPROUTED ANTLERS 2002 UK: Barn Owl Books	When Billy Dexter sprouts antlers his whole life changes. THE BOY WHO SPROUTED ANTLERS is a story of determination and the right to be different. Illustrated by Quentin Blake