

Tim Dunn

Described as the “breakthrough star” co-presenting BBC Four’s surprise TV hit Trainspotting Live, Tim is an unashamedly enthusiastic broadcaster and a delightfully engaging transport historian.

Referred to by some as “the naughty curator” and “at the junction of fogey and hipster” by the Times, Tim possesses a disarming ability to fascinate his audience with even the most niche diversions of British transport history. He’s been a radio presenter, railway museum curator, public speaker on heritage, Ladybird books and museums, adviser to African governments - and an author.
