

Emma Campbell

Writer

Emma Campbell is a writer, blogger, mum of four and patient media volunteer for Cancer Research UK. She started her blog Me and My Four in 2011 when her triplets were toddlers and she'd just finished treatment for breast cancer. A former columnist for Best Magazine, Emma has a regular column in Multiples Magazine, blogs for the Huffington Post and continues to work closely with the media liaison team at Cancer Research UK, sharing her story and helping to raise awareness.

Agents

---

Millie Hoskins

mhoskins@unitedagents.co.uk

Publications

---

Non-Fiction

---

Publication Details	Notes
ALL THAT FOLLOWED 2018 Mirror Books	All That Followed offers honest, heartfelt thoughts on what happens when cancer becomes an unwelcome guest at an already crowded party. She shares her own terror and pain, mixed with the heartwarming and unexpected. The extraordinary kindness of people and the gritty detail of battling a life-threatening illness, all while being a single mum to four children. She opens up about her angels and demons, losing and then finding love again, a constant fear of death mixed with the joy and relief of living, the anxiety of cancer returning - then facing it when it does.

---