

Lucy Santos

Writer

Lucy is an expert in the history of twentieth-century leisure, health, and beauty with a particular interest - some might say obsession - in the cultural history of radioactivity. She has a BA in Egyptian Archaeology (UCL), an MA in Arts and Museum Management (University of Greenwich), a MRes in History (Goldsmiths, University of London) and is part way through a part time PhD entitled 'Radiating Beauty: The use of radioactivity in health and beauty products in the early twentieth century.' Lucy also has a diploma in Freelance and Feature Writing.
