

Chris Moss

Chris Moss was born in Lancashire in 1966. He studied theology and English, and taught English literature in Argentina during the 1990s. While working at the Buenos Aires Herald he began filing stories for the Guardian and Telegraph; he has since contributed to many UK newspapers and magazines, on the arts, travel, books, technology, gender and food. He was joint literary and travel editor at Time Out, London, where he also edited and co-wrote a dozen travel guides. He has written a cultural history of Patagonia and a literary compendium for London commuters.

Agents

Sophie Scard

SScard@unitedagents.co.uk