

Sheena Joughin

Author

Sheena Joughin is twice winner of the London Short Story Competition, and is a regular contributor to the Times Literary Supplement. Her first novel, THINGS TO DO INDOORS, was widely noticed and admired. Fay Weldon thought her 'a major discovery', Julie Burchill said 'I love this book'. Ali Smith wrote 'Sheena Joughin has an unusual clarity of voice and a crafty duality, something both brooding and light, in her writing', and deemed the novel a 'funny, piercing book about lostness, childishness and growing up'.

She lives in West London with her son.

THINGS TO DO INDOORS

2003

Black Swan

A wry and spirited look at being glad and young, this foray back into Eighties London explores relations between sisters, mothers, friends and lovers from the vantage point of a girl caught unexpectedly in the middle.
