

Simon Puttock

Children's Author

Simon was born in New Zealand and dragged up all over the place. He now lives in Edinburgh with no cats, hamsters or goldfish. As a child he lived by the (warm, Caribbean) sea, and I would like to live by the (any old) sea again. In an ideal world, he would live at least part of every year underwater.

(He really doesn't like writing these biog-type things.)

Simon has been a judge for the Whitbread Children's Award and the Kathleen Fidler Award, and a guest lecturer in picture books at the University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
