

Charlotte Jones

Writer

Charlotte Jones had a meteoric rise to success as a playwright. She won the Critics' Circle Most Promising Playwright award in 1999 for "In Flame" and "Martha, Josie and the Chinese Elvis". Her fourth stage play "Humble Boy" premiered at the National Theatre in 2001, and was awarded the Critics' Circle Best New Play Award, the People's Choice Best New Play Award and was nominated for an Olivier award. It transferred to the West End and ran for nine months before opening at the Manhattan Theatre club in New York and being nominated for a Drama desk award.
